If I had been Capt. Vikram Batra what would I've done for my nation!?

Captain Vikram Batra is a household name in India (meaning- everyone knows him). The young soldier was martyred during the Kargil war in 1999. He showed tremendous bravery during the war.

If I was in Captain Batra's shoes, my aim would have been to eliminate all infiltrators disturbing the peace of my motherland. I would have fearlessly led my team during Operation Vijay in Kargil, while keeping my men as safe as possible and inflicting as much damage on the terrorists as possible.

I would have considered all factors before leading the attack and then gone on to capture those points. I would have ensured that it was teamwork and would have led my men with example, rather than sitting back and only issuing orders to them. So, I would have gone ahead and have even been willing to get into face to face combat with the enemy while my men would give me cover.

Had I been Captain Vikram Batra, I would have used my military training in the best way possible, to plan strategic attacks, to reduce casualty and to recapture our lost Indian territory. I would certainly have brought glory and pride to my nation.
